UBIC is a global technology company with headquarters in Japan and offices worldwide. The company specializes in helping its client companies manage vast amounts of electronic information in preparation of discovery related to litigation, carrying out compliance monitoring in real-time and uncovering business opportunities and efficiencies from trends and patterns found within very large volumes of complex, structured and unstructured data.

UBIC develops sophisticated, analytical software applications used by corporations and international law firms to perform highly accurate, extremely thorough searches of very large data sets, replacing the inaccuracies, high-cost and time inefficiencies associated with human based review. Using specialized, machine-learning technology, UBIC's software platforms make it possible for companies to ferret out questionable practices as they occur by qualifying patterns and trends identified in real time within very large data sets. With a degree of accuracy and completeness over 90 percent, UBIC's data-analysis technologies also identify specific information, trends and patterns from within global corporate data networks. This technology defines the state of the art in machine-driven data analysis used in business intelligence and legal discovery matters.

Join UBIC on CNBC and Fox Business News this February to learn more about what is new and now in the age of big-data analytics.
